"Tourney is a game about medieval tournaments and the lives of those who play them. Take charge of the tournament theatre and give your next joust a good show. It will be a tournament without people, only your knights and your competitors. Your knights will be given unique characters, each with their own strengths and weaknesses. And maybe even develop some special skills over time. You will then recruit new knights to have them participate in the next joust. You can control how those new characters perform in the jousts, and also switch out your knights in the running order, if you want to. You may even enhance them with gifts or training. Each knight has their own personal house. That house rules all the knights of the same house, and can decide tactics to give their knights an advantage over others. But when two knights from the same house compete against each other, they will be pitted against each other in matches, with similar rules to jousts and tournaments of old. The knights will compete in jousts, sword fighting and archery. Along with the opportunity to collect various rewards. By winning, you'll acquire gold and spices to upgrade your facility. You can then invite the other houses to compete against you, which will increase the popularity of your knights and your reputation. Every match counts, so if your knights die, it's game over. You have to keep your knights alive and perform well in each and every event to win tournaments!" Storyline - Arena: You are the victor of the Ring Fight, the champion of Arena, the one and only... The throne of Kings will be at your disposal! The time has come, the challenge has been accepted, the name of the winner will be known to all! The time has come for another mythical tournament, for another championship of the highest level. The protagonist must claim the glory of Arena, and with it the favor of the ruler, as well as the favor of the people. The stakes are high, you must win the victories and you must participate in the jousts with only your own strategy at your disposal. Then, if the occasion arises, you must fight with your toughest opponents, your strongest knights and

Large-scale molecular characterization of Candida albicans in human saliva. A bioinformatics-based method was developed to detect and characterize C. albicans genomic DNA obtained from human saliva. The method was used to detect patterns of human host-specific genomic diversity in C. albicans. PCR amplification of DNA from saliva yielded 66 bands in the range of 200-4000bp. The frequency of occurrence of each unique PCR product was determined and correlated with the previously established profile of human saliva. This method demonstrated that C. albicans from saliva are genetically identical to those present in the oral cavity. In addition, the method showed extensive genetic diversity in C. albicans strains isolated from a single individual.A Visit to New India Tag Archives: Intolerance My trip to New Delhi was certainly interesting and somewhat exhausting. More specifically, the whole trip was in the exhausting category since the weather outside was awful, and the weather inside the Metro was awful. Exhausted but interesting nonetheless. This is the layout of the Metro We began our tour in New Delhi at the bus stand. As mentioned in my previous entry, busses are the best way to get around India because they are the most comfortable, efficient, and cheap. They serve all corners of India and are omnipresent, so even if you are only visiting one city, you will probably take one in route. I will admit that New Delhi is a bit of a tourist trap but I do think the city is starting to grow on me. I understand what people are saying about the pollution, the constant buzzing of vendors, and that it's too easy to get trapped in a shadar market or in a scooter rickshaw situation. We took our first bus to the Rambagh Palace area, where the tour begins. The palace is one of the oldest in the area, built sometime during the Mughal period, and is c9d1549cdd

What's new in Shooting Blaster Big Bang Boom:

Sunday, May 22, 2014 The present may be seen as a precocious conundrum arising from the failed constitution of the past, the lurking realisation of a world where a succession of crises have reduced their system of governance to a system of spectacle and social alienation. We witness a world of self-preserving self-interests where our neighbour is the enemy, where we enjoy the means to kill and dominate with impunity, and where the fear of doing so is deeply implanted into our DNA. Our present is the obverse of the axiom, 'Fools learn from experience.' We live in a world of experience-less experience, one founded on the pronouncements and acts of its masters, those who are powerful, which power is not aware of what it is doing. The impotence of our present is made manifest in its systemic ignorance, for its leaders have no knowledge of the value that their societies possessed prior to its collapse. One measure of this failure to recognize and value history is the subconscious knowledge that our societies were not made so; they were constructed. Our present is a trial of all things, a test of all available experience, a system set up to reveal what is real, and what is truth. The present is where our hopes and fears reside. Our hopes are broken and our fear is born from the desire to prevent its replacement. It is from this combination that the biblical commentator has arrived at the conclusion that 'be still, and know that I am God'. The power of eternity is revealed in this disconnection from the hand that has created, that, whether republican or democratic, has created. As history demonstrates, the world cries out for a change of systems, and the present is the confirmation of this. The blind lead the blind. We shall either unite or fight, rid ourselves or be sold. Previous generations fought, but the existential threat of violence which they faced was voluntary, that is, it was an act of rebellion against the rulers, a revolt against the powers that be who believed themselves above us. Even rebellion failed and those who suffered through war were not recreated in the new phantasmagoria, and any attempt to heal wounds in the body politic have failed. None of them that I know of, have succeeded in this one respect. Today we cannot rebel against the state since it is outside that which we know as the State. In our present, truth is identity, and identity is the state; the Hodeaka Studio is proud to announce a post-apocalyptic roleplaying game about a rather mischievous person with two arms, hair, breasts, and a human baby. Don't worry, she's a girl. Most of the game's backstory and goals are... unique. Take a look and decide if it's for you. Features: - A story that you can't predict - Two or four players! Choose whoever is interested in ruining the universe a little - Six planets to explore, with a branching narrative and reactive, all-new, real-time story! - Voice acting from three adult male actors, plus new-age squeeing and... other noises? - Randomized world generation and customisable characters (including skin colour, hair, gender, body height, and eye and hair colour) to create a deep and absorbing experience - Party, chats, or RPS in real-time? Your choice! - Romances, non-romantic friendships, and hate relationships! - Lots of weird new adventures and secrets! And also a few more than usual. About Hodeaka Studio: Hodeaka Studio is a team of three guys. We're inspired by old video games, videogame characters, anime, anime characters, and out-of-this-world crazy stuff. Thanks for visiting. For more info, you can follow the team on Twitter, Facebook, Web, Steam, Discord, Reddit, and Youtube. GOSH, the universe is an exciting place home to so many strange worlds and potential new friends. Unless, of course, you're on the ESS Shyp, Erth's best, and you've seen everything, and none of it can live up to Erth. At least, that's how First Officer Commander Nadalie seems to think. If only there was a way to totally, irresponsibly and wantonly reshape the entire universe to a single, totally unqualified person's will. Understandably, Second Officer Commander Aysha doesn't think such power belongs in any mortal's hands, especially not one already ambitious Erthling with little love for alien life. But what do you, Captain-What's-Your-Name, think about it? It's up to
