Download links: PC version (currently unavailable) Mac version (currently unavailable) Cloud version Screenshots: A: This video shows the older version v0.13.9 which is the last version to have a released password protection. This version was however already somewhat patched against the resulting game crashes. This version has this commit which adds a security check on the world save: To prevent world modification when Factorio is run in 'password protected' mode, the save function is checking first if a world path exists in the save dialog. If no world path is selected, then the save is carried out in the world save directory. This is also preventing the use of the /tmp directory for the save purpose. After the recent launch of v0.14.0 the protection check was modified to not check if a file exists in a directory but to use a path instead which will also work when the save has already been saved in a working directory and there is no save hook installed. This seems to work, but I'm not sure if v0.13.9 saves world mod should be bug free. Other than that there should not be any difference except for the newest engine upgrade. However, this version has three other issues. The first one is that the new version of the game is not compatible with the version of the engine in v0.13.9. You can fix this by downloading the "engine" and "editor" files separately from the download file
